

In far away Iceland, U. S. doughboys express pleasure over a short-wave program.

Time out in the lounge of a railroad car headquarters to hear an important broadcast.

The world at the finger-tips of two soldiers in a short-wave listening post.

Concentrated listening by Army men at a railroad siding.

Short-wave listening at an outpost in Puerto Rica.

KEEPING IN TOUCH

Wherever they are, in training or in action, U. S. fighting forces look to radio to maintain their association with "home" -- it may be the voice of a friend, word from the home town or news from the good, old U.S.A. It all serves the same purpose for the service men who have no intentions of losing contact with things that were familiar before the war interrupted their lives. Radio does this job, too.

Winter-clad soldiers anchor cable for antenna in far northern base.

Radio and games in the barracks at a Naval Air Station.